An extract from “The London Gazette” No 30876 dated 30 august 1918, records the following. In Mesopotamia, in November last Lt Waddams was instructing a class in firing rifle grenades. While a private of the 85th Burmans was under instruction the rifle missed fired and the detonator of the grenade started working without the grenade leaving the rifle. Lt Waddams realising the danger, rushed forward and pushing back the soldier, seized his rifle with one hand and the grenade with the other and tried to throw it over the wall before it exploded. Unfortunately the grenade exploded in his hand and he received fatal injuries. The soldier whose life Lt Waddams saved was only slightly injured
